What is one action step you can take to connect with CORE?

Augie Choice

All students receive up to $2,000 to support a qualifying hands-on learning experience of their choice: internship, research, or study abroad. Augie Choice can be applied to cover the cost of the experience including student's housing, travel expenses, professional attire, stipend for unpaid internships, and other expenses.

Career Coaching

Our Career Coaching model focuses on students' field of interest rather than majors. This allows students in any major to explore and pursue careers, grad/professional schools, internships, and post-grad service based on fields of interest in partnership with Career Coaches, knowledgeable in those same fields.

Center for Community Health and Wellness

This interdisciplinary center (located in Lindberg Center) strengthens campus and community wellbeing through applied student research, internships, community service, and other experiential learning opportunities. The Center's focus aligns with Hettler's six dimensions of Wellness (occupational, physical, social, intellectual, spiritual, and emotional).

EDGE Center

EDGE is the campus Entrepreneurial Center and is not just for business majors - open to all students of all majors. EDGE provides creative services to local businesses and nonprofits, including website design, graphic design, event planning, and marketing services. EDGE is also home to several other student groups such as Ads and HerCampus.

Internships

65% of all students gain experience, knowledge, and skills from internships. Students can earn academic credits for their internships. Augie Choice can be used to offset the costs associated with an internship or for pay for those internships that are unpaid. To learn more or to register Internship for Credit contact Bobbie Tidball (bobbietidball@augustana.edu).

Student Employment

Using Handshake students can connect with employers both on and off campus for part-time and internship positions. The Flexible Employment Program (FEP) allows students to find temporary positions giving students flexibility and access to gaining skills and earning money. Contact: Bobbie Tidball (bobbietidball@augustana.edu).

Student Research and Creative Scholarship

CORE works with interested students at every level to find research opportunities, as well as funding sources for their research and creative projects, presentations, and travel—including Augustana grants. By pursuing research opportunities, students can build skills and explore various applications of their field and broader liberal arts education.

Study Away

CORE helps students find the best study-abroad programs for their needs, including some domestic study-away options and programs from short term experiences to a full year, on six continents. This also includes programs during the J-term. Students of all majors can study abroad, which is relatively affordable at Augustana. Along with study away programs, Augustana offers internships and service programs in international locations and cities across the United States.

Upper Mississippi Center (UMC)

The UMC works with local communities to help solve short- and long-term problems those communities face. The UMC engages students and classes from many fields in projects related to transportation, economics, landscape and urban forests, public health, and issues related to the health and sustainability of communities. Through the UMC, students can propose or continue their individual or group research through internships and special projects.

Vocational Exploration

This is the place for students who are unsure of exactly where they are headed. Keri Bass (keribass@augustana.edu) helps students explore questions such as who am I, what's my place in the world, and how can I make a difference? During vocational exploration students can explore how all aspects of the Augustana experience: academics, co-curricular activities, volunteer service and relationships with friends and family help answer these questions. Students can connect these questions to the process of exploring majors, internships, study abroad, volunteer service, graduate school, and careers. Set up your appointment through Handshake.
