Does your school of choice require an admissions test?

Your LSAT, MCAT, GRE, GMAT, DAT, and OAT scores are very important when it comes to your admission to graduate school, but how do you really prepare yourself for these types of tests? ASU Career Services is now partnering with a resource called The Princeton Review.

The Princeton Review is an organization that strives to prepare students for those difficult graduate school admission exams: LSAT, MCAT, GRE, GMAT, DAT, and OAT. They are preparing students by providing all ASU students with FREE (or discounted) test preparation courses!

The free test-prep courses are online and SELF-PACED in order to fit into all students' schedules. ASU students can also take advantage of discounted instructor-led courses taught by expert Princeton Review instructors.

ASK US how you can utilize these resources TODAY by contacting asugradprep@review.com or sign-up using the attached QR code. For more information, please visit career.asu.edu.

For in-person instructor-led MCAT courses please contact asugradprep@review.com
