

Questions to ask your Interviewers

Asking thoughtful questions at the end of the interview not only demonstrates your genuine interest in the position but also helps you assess if the company is the right fit for you. Here are some example questions you can ask the interviewers at the end of your job interview:

1. Questions About the Role:

Can you describe the typical day-to-day responsibilities of this position?

What are the immediate challenges you expect the new hire to tackle in the first six months?

What does success look like in this role within the first year?

2. Questions About the Team and Company Culture:

How would you describe the company culture here?

Can you tell me more about the team I'll be working with?

What do you enjoy most about working at this company?

3. Questions About Professional Development:

What opportunities for professional development does the company provide to its employees?

Are there mentorship programs or opportunities for skill enhancement within the organization?

4. Questions About Performance and Expectations:

How is performance typically evaluated in this position?

What are the company's expectations for this role in the first 90 days?

5. Questions About the Future of the Company:

Can you share any upcoming projects or initiatives the team/company is excited about?

What is the company's vision for the future, and how does this department contribute to that vision?

6. Questions About the Hiring Process:

What are the next steps in the interview process?

When do you expect to make a decision about this position?

7. Questions About Company Values and Impact:

How does this company give back to the community or contribute to social causes?

Can you share an example of a project the team has worked on that had a significant impact on the company or its clients?

Remember, the questions you ask should reflect your genuine curiosity and help you assess if the company aligns with your career goals and values. Avoid asking questions that can be easily answered through research, as it might give the impression that you haven't done your homework about the company.

