

Campus Internship Development Fund 2019-2020

W

Opportunities to learn outside the classroom are a vital component of a college education. Increasing student access to these professional learning experiences is critical to UW's efforts to graduate career-ready Huskies.

The Campus Internship Development Fund (CIDF) provides temporary monies to UW-Seattle departments for the purpose of hiring UW-Seattle students into high-quality, short-term internship positions.

Students say...

I built strong relationships within the department to complete assigned tasks, seek support, and further my professional career.

It was an amazing opportunity to apply everything that I was learning in class in a professional environment, while at the same time improving skills that are key in an office setting.

Direct experience on legislative affairs and policy-implementation were critical to my career goals in higher education public policy. I cannot imagine a more resourceful internship position or internship director than I was privileged to have.

Managers say...

Not only does this internship provide much needed support for us to implement programs, but it is also wonderful to support the professional development of an aspiring student and academic affairs professional!

Having a "super star" intern was energizing and so very valuable. Thanks for allowing us to have this experience this summer. It has greatly impacted our unit.

$310,971
Awarded

16,000
Hours worked

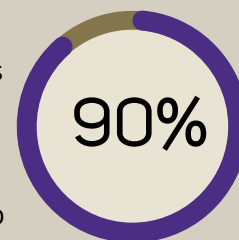

105
Academic terms

45 Interns in 37 Departments

90% of students agreed they:

- Learned or enhanced skills
- Confirmed, clarified, or refined career goals
- Are more "career-ready" because of their internship

Interns reported that 87% of their time was spent engaging in work that directly related to their learning goals or interests

Data collected from the 2019-20 CIDF Intern and Supervisor program evaluations

QUESTIONS?
EMAIL UWCIDF@UW.EDU

CAREER & INTERNSHIP CENTER
UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON
Division of Student Life