“My connection with my mentor has allowed me to connect with other professionals, hear how they reached their current career, and has given me a drive to reach the goals I have set for the PLT Green Mentor program and beyond.”

The Project Learning Tree (PLT) Green Mentor program is a dynamic short-term program that connects young adults (ages 18–30) with seasoned Green Jobs professionals. We have matched hundreds of people based on their personalities, learning styles, goals, interests, and more using an industry-leading platform and algorithm.

With less than 5 hours a month, mentees can expand their Green Jobs knowledge, goals, and network. And for 2–3 hours a month, Mentors can inspire the next generation of green leaders, recruit employees, and gain new perspectives.
“Before the PLT Green Mentor program, I could describe my personal growth using only one word: stagnant. My mentor and I have discussed ways where, as she says, we can “cross-pollinate.” Through collaboration and genuine discussions, we listen, learn, teach and guide each other through our mentorship progress. It’s an overwhelming feeling of joy and motivation.”

Mentorship is an important way to foster and inspire the next generation of forest and conservation leaders and build a diverse and resilient Green Jobs workforce by reducing barriers to landing a job. In fact, 93% of mentees in the PLT Canada/World Forestry Congress Green Mentor cohort reported getting a job or advancing in their career because of their mentor.
