The Perfect Fit: How Do I Know if a Job is Right for Me?

Review the job description carefully. Have a Morris background? Can you make personal connections that employers have in common? They seem interested in your skills. We see how much potential you have. Yes, it's likely that you know more than they want you to know. This is an opportunity to gather data about the role and organization at both the tactical and strategic levels:

- Help give you knowledge about the role and organization at both the tactical and strategic levels.
- Help you identify potential questions you might ask to answer your interview questions in return.
- Help you ask questions that can help inform your decision. As you prepare for your conversation with an employer, you’ll want to gather information that can help you make a good decision.
- Gather data during the interview process
