Internship Red Flags

- You are asked to provide credit card, bank account, or other financial documentation
- Supervisor's email domain does not match the domain used by other company employers
- You are promised a job at the end of your internship before they have seen your performance
- Position requires you to invest in or purchase items used by the company
- The job posting includes a lot of spelling and grammatical errors
- You are asked to provide a photo of yourself
- Lack of online presence
- Salary range is very wide ("you can earn $30K-$80K the first year!")
- Majority negative reviews on Glassdoor.com and/or positive reviews feel scripted
- The job you were hired for isn't the job that you are actually doing
