CAREER READINESS COMPETENCIES

PROFESSIONALISM

When looking to hire a new employee, companies are interested in the skills each candidate brings to the table. Career readiness competencies are the primary skills employers look for when hiring. This month we're taking a look at professionalism!

Professionalism focuses on recognizing how work environments differ, understanding and demonstrating effective work habits, and acting in the interest of the larger community and workplace. Learn more about how to improve your professionalism HERE.

Sample behaviors that apply to professionalism include:

- Maintaining a positive personal brand that aligns with your organization and personal career values.
- Being present and prepared while demonstrating dependability.
- Consistently meeting or exceeding goals and expectations.
- Prioritizing and completing tasks to accomplish organizations goals.
